habits made him an object to be remem- | bered. He spent much time in devising a pump of improved pattern. This was a very ingenious affair, and promised to another upon which he was then working, concerning which he would say but little. To secure perpetual motion was his principal object, and many years of patient labor and thought were spent for its accomplishment. On several occasions while trying for this end he got to the stopping point, and could go no further,

but his labors revealed the fact that he was possessed of much natural ability and Close application to the study of his schemes somewhat impaired his mind and made him appear indifferent to the outside world. In fact his interest in the affairs of every-day life soon vanished, and he concluded to shun the world alto-

He resided with a brother in a bovel on the north end of Ladd's "castle," on Mill sireet. His surroundings were filthy and his life made miserable by the free use of opium. The furniture of his apartment consisted of a chair and a stoye, and he spent many years of his secluded life on the scanty earnings of his brother,

which was hardly enough to keep soul

When the "castle" took fire on Sept. 7 clothed. Rather than to come out of his filthy den among many of his old acquaintances, he barred his doors, saving that his things were insured, and threat-

Curious Marriage Vows.

[Glasgow Herald.]

"The Stones of Stennes," in the Orkney

Islands) seems to have had a romantic pledge of love which was to them as sa-they repaired to the Temple of the Moon, where the woman, in presence of the man, feel down on her knees and prayed to the God of Woden (for such was the name of the God whom they addressed on this occasion) that he would enable her to perform all the promises and obligations she had made, and was to make, to the young man present; after which they both went to the Temple of the Sun, where the man prayed in like

They then went to the stone of Odin:

and, the man being on one side and the woman, on the other, they took hold of each other's right hand through the hole in it, and there swore to be constant and

A Remarkable Rescue.

Shamokin Herald.]

A few nights ago Robert Gardener, re siding near Shamokin, was attracted by the strange cries of a man. On arising from his bed and looking out of the window, he found that they emanated from Calling his next-door neighbor, they walked over to the hill with a light.

Nearing a cave hole they heard the noise

again and on looking down found a man there is a hole running away down to the old Peerless slope. Had he fallen

A Friend to the Blind.

[Golden Days.]

tor Prime's collection-a gray sparrow-brown-and-white bird, known as a Japanese nun, and named Dick, became the

The sparrow's home had a round hole as a doorway. Little Dick would sit on Mortality Among Bishops' Wives.

[London Punch.

sparrow's friend.

leap in, never failing.

Recently, one of the old birds in Doc shake with the palsy in old age.

the hill opposite his residence.

eagerly, and was hoisted out.

Orcadians paid great respect to this manner before the woman.

faithful to each other.

cred as a marriage vow.

and life together.

had a great genius for mechanical inven-

His pump idea was only secondary to be a success.

A LESSON FOR WIVES.

[Philiadelphia Item.] "Florence, you surely will not go?"

"Why not?" The pretty little blonde lifted a pair of saucy, blue eyes to the face of the man at her side.

"Why do you object to my going to Mrs. Houston's ball, Robert? I thought you were proud of my social success and liked your wife to be a reigning belle."

Robert Darrow looked grave. "It is because I cannot attend you to this ball, my dear," he returned, for important business calls me out of townbusiness so urgent that I will not spoil your anticipated pleasure by explaining it to you. And you are so determined to go that you are willing to accept the escort of your cousin, Ralph, whom you know to be a notorious flirt and 'lady killer.' Florence, I wish you would give it up."

She pouted her pretty red lips.

"Do be reasonable, Bob," she cried; "I have my dresses all prepared, and there will be nothing prettier at Mrs. Houston's to-night. As for cousin Ralph, he is a gentleman; you need not be afraid to trust me to his care. It is not so terrible a thing after all. Our own carriage will convey cousin Ralph and myself to Mr. Houston's house, only whole, dear, I think you ought to make no objections."

He stooped and kissed the pretty face with a stifled sigh of disappointment.

"Very well, my darling," he returned, gently, "I will not stand in the way of your happiness. Go, Florence, if you wish, and enjoy yourself."

But there was a troubled expression upon Robert Darrow's bandsome face, and his eyes held a grave look in their depths as he turned away. Somehow the heart of the gay, young wife smote her a little.

"I wonder what is the matter, she exclaimed, when he had left the room; "Robert is not like himself anymore. I 500 feet, when the leader halted in a wonder what troubles him? He is too grandly proud and defiant manner, with in a different way, and by a less self-posproud and reserved to tell me, but he neck curved, nostrils distended, erect, has something on his mind, I am sure and tail on dress parade, and all the band

She leaned her head back among the cushions of her easy chair and closed her eyes wearily; she had been busy all day, opping and making ready for this wonderful ball, and was quite fatigued. She did not hear her husband's light steps when he entered the room, all ready for his journey, which was into a neighboring city. He stooped and kissed | worthy of an artist's pencil. the pretty, childish face.

"I will not wake her," he said to himself. "Poor little darling, how she will suffer when she knows all the bitter with black mane, tail and knees. In truth! I will keep it from her as long | this band there are two white horses and as I can."

Then, with a long, lingering look, he turned away, descended the stairs, and leaving the house, turned toward the depot, from whence he embarked on his

When Florence Darrow opened her eyes the twilight shadows were stealing into her room, and Marie, her deft little maid, was lighting the gas in the pretty lily-shaped globes. "Mr. Darrow has gone, ma'am," said the girl; "he left you these flowers." And Marie laid a bouquet of lovel Parma violets before her mistress as st spoke. Florence seized them with a cry of rapture, and buried her face in their fragrant, purple hearts.

"Oh, how beautiful!" she cried;

"Marie, is my dress all ready?" "All ready, Mrs. Darrow, and dinner is waiting.

So Florence went down to the pretty dining room, where a dainty repast awaited her. But it was fearfully lonely and desolate without her husband. The heart of the young wife contracted with terrible pain as the thought entered it: What if she should never see Robert again. She missed him everywhere. The meal was eaten in dreary loneliness; then she retired to her own chamber to prepare for the ball. Two hours later Florence Darrow entered the grand drawing-room at Mrs. Houston's elegant mansion leaning on the arm of her cousin, Ralph Arden, handsome, but rather dissipated-looking

She was lovely, in a trailing robe of delicate azure silk with frosty, white lace over-dress looped with purplehearted violets, with a knot of the same fragrant blossoms in her hair and at her white throat.

A murmur of admiration went around after dance solicited.

Late in the evening she stood alone for a few moments in a deep embrazure of a window. Some gentlemen near were busily conversing and did not observe her.

"Yes, it is true," she heard one "Darrow is at the very verge of ruin, and I am told that his wife's extravagance is at the bottom of it all. do not doubt it. Look at her to night dressed like a queen, surrounded by admirers, without her husband's protection. No wonder he is ruined and despairing. It is the reckless extravagance of their wives which wrecks the prosperity of one-half our young business

With a stifled exclamation, Florence was about to spring forward and indig nantly deny the charges, but at that moment a newcomer drew near.

"Ah, good evening, Hartley," he began, "Have you heard the awful news! Awfully sorry to tell it, but Robert Darrow is financially ruined, and in despair has blown his brains out."

With a wild shriek of mortal agony, the young wife darted forward, she felt herself tottering and falling, and then she opened her eyes.

She was in her own chamber and Marie

"Why, Mrs. Darrow!" cried the girl, in dismay, "vou have been asleep and You would have fallen to the floor just now if I had not happened in. Mr. Darrow has gone, and he left you these to wear to the ball."

And even as in her dream Marie held up a bouquet of Parma violets. Mrs. Darrow took them and pressed them to her lips, her heart full of gratitude that it had all been a dream, for she had not awakened since her husband's departure. "You can put my dress away, Marie,"

Then, checking the girl's astonished look, she added "Tell Saunders to bring the carriage round. I want to go to the depot to see

Mr. Darrow before he leaves. See, there is half an hour to train time!" The coachman brought the carriage, while Florence tied on a hat, and in fifteen minutes she was at the depot, where she found her husband just purchasing his ticket. She drew him aside, and the story was quickly told. His face grew bright with "Your dream is partly true, Florence," he returned, "I did not wish you to know the danger my business is in, my darling, but I have a hope of riding it over, and since I find my little wife so ready to assist me, I am sure I shall succeed.'

The train came steaming in, he kissed her good-by and took his departure. Florence remained at home that night, and pacticed a new song for Robert; she felt as though a heavy load had been lifted from her heart, and determined never to give the world cause to say, in reality, what her dream had revealed to Robert Darrow returned in a day or two with great hopes for the future in his heart. The danger was indeed tided over, and soon brighter days dawned for the young man. And from that day they turned over a new leaf. Florence willingly retrenched her expenses, and did all in her power to be a help-meet to her husband.

In consequence they ultimately became very wealthy, and certainly very three or four blocks away, and I shall much happier than when society had not remain late. Therefore, on the been the chief aim of the young wife's in the right way; and the instance given

Florence Darrow never forgot ber dream and the lesson which it had taught her.

A Picture of the Plains.

[Los Angeles Express.] One of the most startling and romantic features of border life occured recently on the Wild Horse prairie, thirty herself up and goes serenely to sleep, semiles north of Los Angeles, when a band of wild horses, under the lead of a noble sorrel stallion came galloping over the plains to reconnoitre a company of surveyors engaged in making a survey of gracefully. Indeed, everyone experiand his party of surveyors till within ranged themselves on each side of him like a squad of cavelry in battle charge. After surveying the scene for a few moments the leader galloped away, followed by the band in the most graceful and | it must be done as the cat does it, withdignified manner. The scene was most romantic, and the picture of the lordly leader, with his most obedient servants. in their fleet and graceful motions, was

There was another band of wild horses on the same prairie, under the leadership of a dark mabogany bay stallion the rest are bay and sorrel mainly.

[Chicago Eye.] From time immemorial, woman has called art to assist her in embracing the charms of nature. Painting the face was common early as the fourteenth century; and we find it alluded to by Shakspeare in "Love's Labor Lost." Hamlet's reproof is doubtless familiar to all: have heard of your paintings, too, well enough; God bath given you one face, and you have made yourself another." No respectable woman dared paint her face as long as the commonwealth existed, but the practice was revived during the reign of Charles II. The Spectator | making the splinters fly in all directions. Lady Coventry-a belle of Horace Walher cheeks. This lady actually died from the evil effects of powders and paint. The Elizabethian age was sometimes spoken of as the "age of cosmetics." The beaux of that day used the art as well as the ladies. Wine was considered a great beautifier, and we read of the wine bath. The Earl of Shrewsbury complained of the Queen of Scots, that her wine-bath was a great expense. Milk was also used in the same way. Then there were preparations for concealing bad complexions, removing superfluous hair, &c., just as there are at the present time.

A Compromise.

[Merchant Traveler.] "Mr. Robinson," said the bookkeeper to the old man, in the office, "here's a that spot the forest and the scrub have letter from Smith, over in Indiana, in disappeared and their place is occupied the room; she was immediately sur- which he proposes to pay 60 per cent. of by the finest city on the celebrated gold fields of Victoria.

"Gootness, kracious, vot ish dat? Vot is dot?" screamed the old man. "Smith proposes to pay 60 per cent," repeated the bookkeeper. "Can't ve schveese more ash dot out oaf him, no vav?"

"No, sir: I understand that's the very best he can do.' "Vell, dot ish shameful for a man to sheat us in dot vay. Only 60 per cent., you shay?"

"That's all." "Von't he make eet sixty-von?"

"No. 60 is the limit." "Vell, eef ve must, ve must, I shupposhe, bood I don't like dot vay oaf settiling. Ve shoot haf mate two hoondert unt sheventy-five per chent, on dose goots, unt now ve vill haf to pe satisfied glip tongue. At an early age he develmit only a leedle ofer a hoodert unt ten, oped a taste for machenery, and he was unt any beezness man can see dot sooch profits vill ruin trade in sphite oaf all ve can do to increashe de proshperity oaf our republican insthitutions. Electricity the Motive Power for Yachts. [fouting.]

Steam, perhaps, is destined to be but an incident in the movement for the substitution of artificial motive power for the force of the wind.

Experiments lately made in England indicate that perhaps electricity may become a substitute for steam. It has been proven practicable mechanically, and it peculiar habit of laying aside his acremains to be seen whether it will stand the test of economy. Its introduction would abolish the dangers threated from fire and explosions, and increase comfort by doing away with the annoyances of heat, smoke and the smell of oil coming from the engines and boilers of small vachts. These odors are apt to so far pershe said. "I have changed my mind; I steam yacht intolerable to many per-

"LET LOVE ABIDE."

In the gardens at Bramshill an ancient wedding ring was dug up. The posy engraved upon is, "Let love abide."

see the house in dreams, and know the charm that haunts each scient room Where Lely's beauties smile and glow, an triumph in immortal bloom; and old dead loves and joys of yore come back to

Deep in the ivy on the walls, the peacock sinks his purple breast: The place is full of wild bird-calls, and pigeons coo themselves to rest, While tunefully, through rush and brake, the honevsuckle bowers, To blend, in chambers dim and vast, with fainter sweets of summers past Do shadows of the days of old still linger in the garden ways! Long hidden, deep beneath the mould, the ound a ring of other days,

Across the long grey terrace sweeps the subtle and through the stately portal creeps a sigh from scent of orange flowers,

And faith, and hope, and memory cling about that simple wedding ring. t bears a posy quaint and sweet (and well the graven letters wear,) et love abide."—the words are meet for the who pray love's endless prayer; The old heart-language, sung or sighed, forever speaks, "Let love abide."

noble mansion, proud and old, and beautiful in shade or shine ige after age your walls enfold the treasures of And yet-let time take all the rest, if love abide for love is best.

-[Good Words.

[London Spectator.] We have heard it said that you can do everything, however unpleasant it may be to those around you, if you only do it to prove the truth of this assertion is taken from humble life.

The Value of Manner.

A cat walks daintily into the room on a cold winter's day, and with a benign glance at the company and a melodious purring sound she walks leisurely around, selects for herself the warmest place in the room-perhaps the only warm place, right in front of the grate-curls cure that no one will be so unreasonable as to question her right to sleep wherever inclination prompts her to sleep. No one calls it selfish, no one is annoyed, because she has done it so prettily, and ences an access of warmth and comfort The band dashed toward Capt. Keller in themselves from beholding pussy's blissful repose Now, imagine the same thing done sessed individual-if it were done hurriedly, or poisily, or clumsily, or diffidently even, or in any way obtrusively, what a storm of indignation it would excite in the bosom of all beholders? How thoughtless, how inconsiderate, how selfish! No. out a sound or a gesture to provoke criticism, or it must not be done at all.

A Golden City. [Philadelphia News.]

The death of Peter Whyte recalls the strange story of the founding of the city of Victoria, Australia. In an Australian mining camp at one of the tents sat four men-the 10th of June, 1858talking earnestly of their future and bemoaning the past. For several months these four men had worked together in the same claim, sometimes getting barely sufficient for daily wants; sometimes not even for that. For several weeks, indeed, they bad labored without any result. After a long discussion they decided to abandon the Down in the mine, the three looked gloomily around, with a kind of sulky regret at having to leave the scene of so much useless toil. "Good by," said one. "I'll give you a farewell blow." And raising his pick he struck the quarts. frequently mentions this custom of the His practiced eye caught a glittering ladies. It is said that the husband of speck in one of the bits at his feet. Stooping, he examined it and the place pole's time-used to chase her round the he had struck, when, with a loud excladinner-table with a wet napkin, that he mation, he knelt and satisfied himself might remove the superfluous color from that it was gold! He then commenced picking vigorously. His mates caught the meaning and followed his example. In dead silence they worked on-they had discovered a monster nugget! Then a wild, glad shout sounded in the ears of the one at the windless, who had sunk into a half-doze, feeling, probably, the want of his breakfast- To his inquiry, What is going on?" the cry came, "Wind up," and as he did so there rose to the surface a huge mass of virgin gold. were almost insane with joy. After watching it through the day and livelong night they had it conveyed in safety to the bank. It was named the Wel-

When fully exposed to view the men come Stranger, and yielded the fortunate discoverers of it $50,000. On the site of

AN ERRATIC GENIUS.

Death in the Midst of Poverty and Loneliness.

On Sunday morning last occurred the death of Peter Carmichael, of Le Roy, an erratic mechanical genius, aged about 57 yerrs, says The Buffalo Express. The deceased, in his early days, was a respected resident of this village. He dressed well, sported a gold-headed cane, and counted many of the prominent young men among his friends.

He was very familiar to many of our older residents, who will always remember him for his peculiar eccentricities and found to be always working upon some object, the secret of which he would keep to himself until there was a probability of success, and then he would confide in some trusted friend.

In this way he accumulated ideas that brought out many appliances of real worth, among which was a peculiar match-safe containing several conveniences. An improved gate for railway stations was also produced, and while it had many commendable points, it was not adopted by anybody owing to his complishments as fast as they were com-

He also succeeded in constructing a steam-engine, which promised to be an invention of great value, but this, like all his other mechanical productions, soon found retirement. His gate, however, others. Wherever he went his peculiar interesting.

LOVE'S TOKEN.

A wild bird over the housetop flew, And she said: "Oh, fleetwing, take A tender message of love from me To my love for my love's own sake."

And the bird flew over the woodland, Out over the ocean blue; On his breast was the maiden's missive, A regalia both warm and true.

Fast flew to lover and wanderer, And as fast as the wind the bird.

Till the message was worn and faded, And illegible every word. Yet the bird delivered his burden One day to the lover's hand,

And said to him: "Truant and rover,

I have come from a far-off land; "Have followed thy course like a tempest In bearing this word to thee;

It is worn with the storms of Heaven And washed with the waves of the sea, "Till the words are all gone, but you kn No storm with its fierce intent

And the lover stretched forth with ardor The palm of his sunburned hand, And bore to his lips, with a blessing, Which reached from the sea to the land

Could wash out the love that was in it,

Or the kisses this fair one sent.'

This blotted and tender love token. For as sure as love is known It will, if not written or spoken, Find ways of its own to its own.

Bill Arp's Boy. [Atlanta Constitution.]

I had a good time last week. I took little Carl along with me for company and it was his first trip, and he kept me 1883, the flames swept over his roof, and the water completely deluged his place. entertained watching him taking in the The firemen attempted to get him out, wonders of Atlanta and railroads and when he was found to be only half high bridges and big houses. We dined at Mr. Durand's in the car shed, and after the waiter had spread about a dozen little dishes around the little boy's plate ened anyone who might enter. No he looked up at me with a look of innoamount of persuasion could induce him cent amazement and said, "Papa, is all to come out. A body of men bad about this dinner mine?" He spied Mr. Dumade up their minds to raid his place rand's bran new silver coffee urn, and askwhen it was found that his abode could ed me if that wasn't a water tank for the engine. Seeing some big boxes full A lack of money in his early days had of eggs in a store, he stopped and whistled no doubt prevented the completion of a note of surprise, and asked me if they several wonderful pieces of mechanism. didn't have a factory there to make eggs. During his early sickness he had been Mr. Block's candy factory filled his ingreatly neglected. He remained in a fantile mind to the brim. As we walked cold, filthy room, without much clothalong the marble tables where they were ing, and with little covering, and drawing it out and cutting it up I noticscarcely any attention. His remains ed that the little fragments stuck to his were deposited in the Myrtle Street cemfingers in spite of my caution,

Relief Afforded Dyspeptics by Cayenne Pepper.

[Popular Science Monthly] One of these standing pillars of stone Cayenne pepper may be selected as a vpical example of a condiment property so called. Mustard is a food and condiment combined; this is the case with Through the upper part a round hole some others. Curry-powders are mixtures was cut, to which it is presumed the of a very potent condiment with more or sacrificial victim was tied; but in later less farinaceous materials, and sulphur times it was put to other uses. Hither compounds, which, like the oil of musmany a pair of lovesick swains resorted, tard, of onions, garlic, etc., may have a and by joining hands through this magic certain amount of nutritive value. ring plighted their troths forever-a

The mere condiment is a stimulating drug that does its work directly upon The Scottish Society of Antibuarians | the inner lining of the stomach, by exgives the following explanation of the citing it to increased abnormal activity. A dyspeptic may obtain immediate relief "When the parties had agreed to marry | by using cayenne pepper. Among the advertised patent medicines is a pill bearing the very ominous name of its compounder, the active constituent of which is cayenne. Great relief and temporary comfort are commonly obtained by using it as a "dinner pill." If thus used only as a temporary remedy for acute and temporary, or exceptional, attack of indigestion, all is well, but the cavenne, whether taken in pills or dusted over the food or stewed in with it in curries or any otherwise, is one of the most cruel of slow poisons when taken habitually. Thousands of poor wretches are crawling miserably toward their graves, the victims of the multitude of maladies of both mind and body that are connected with chronic, incurable dyspepsia, all brought about by the habitual use of cayenne and its condi-

stone of Odin, and when visiting it were in the habit of depositing some present mental cousins. in the shape of bread and cheese, or a rag. The usual history of these victims is It was believed that if a young child was that they began by overfeeding, took the passed through this hole it would never condiment to force the stomach to do more than its healthful amount of work, using but little at first. Then the stomache became tolerant of this little, and demanded more; then more, and more, and more, until at last inflamation, ulceration, torpidity, and finally death of the digestive powers, accompained with all that long train of miseries to which I have referred.

WHAT THEY PUT IN FLAVORS, Fusel Oil and Sulphuric Acid Among the Things.

[New York Sun.] there. They procured a washline, and threw it to him, which he grasped very "There is mighty little genuine fruit extract in the syrups and flavors of commerce," the chemist of a manufacturing On being questioned as to how he got there, he said he lived on the hill, be- house said, pushing aside glass jars, little while in the smoke room, then yond the Polish church. About 5 o'clock strainers and retorts, so as to make a trots out to his other place in the middle in the afternoon he had been hunting his goat, and, not seeing the hole, fell informula. "Natural flavors are both to it. His fall was about forty feet. He to it. His fall was about forty feet. He weak and costly. For instance, if you had called until he was tired and could call no more, and had given up all hopes sugar down pineapples or strawberries. before he saw their light. In falling he you get a delightful natural syrup, but had landed on an offset, and from this your white sugar alone will cost you 88 cents a gallon, and the fruit is expensive, as you know. The flavor is just at into this he probably would never have its proper strength, and will not go a great way in flavoring additions to the syrup; and so only a small portion of the fruit syrups and essences of commerce have any fruit about them. became blind. Straightway a little dark

He unstopped a vial of thin, transparent liquid. It diffused a strong pineapple odor of irritating pungency.

"That," he said, "is butvric acid. Mixed with alcohol, it is the pineapple a perch opposite the hole and chirp. The | oil of commerce, and it enters into nearly blind bird would come out, and, guided every flavor manufactured and into most by Dick's chirps, would leap to the perfumes. It is extracted from rancid perch, and so on to the seed cup and fat. The tallow oil, which is the basis water bottle. But the most curious part of artificial butter, will furnish it. Anof the performance was when the blind other prominent ingredient of artificial sparrow would try to get back into the house. Dick would place the sparrow better by the name of fusel oil. Some one of its compounds go into the exactly opposite the hole by shoving him along the perch. When opposite, Dick manufacture of the flavors of pineapple, would chirp and the blind bird would strawberry, raspberry, apricot, pear, orange and apple. Compounds of methyl, an extract of coal tar, are also much used. Succinic acid, extracted from fat, and benzoic acid, originally ex-A correspondent of the Pall Mal tracted from a vegetable resin, but now Gazette has called attention to the alarmmade from naphthaline, a coal oil proing mortality among bishops' wives. It duct, are also much used in various been married twice and one, the Bishop thence its name is derived from the of Liverpool, who has been married Latin word for ant, formica. Chlorothree times. It is not likely that even form goes into some flavors, notably and our marine editor has a scow on the these alarming statistics will permanent- grape essence, and oxalic acid goes into was rendered available for many pur- ly detract from the value of a bishop in the bloom of gooseberry, apricot, lemon war correspondent, Sir Garnet Wolseley in the form of others, and their strength We have no religious editor.

or odor is due to their exceeding volath

"Are not such compounds injurious?" "Not when used simply for flavoring purposes," was the answer. "The reason why they may be used to imitate natural flavors with such success is doubtless due to the fact that the flavors of the natural fruits are due to their presence. Butyric acid is naturally present in the pine apple, tartaric acid in wine, citric acid in lemons, and oxalic acid in gooseberries. GENUINE While artificial flavors or essences would be poisonous, taken in large quantities, it does not follow that their use as flavors is injurious any more than that almonds should not be eaten because their concentrated extract is poisonous. As a matter of fact soda water flavors and candy flavors are almost invariably artificial, and the bouquet and flavor of many a bottle of wine is due to the various amylic or fusel oil ethers."

"I remember," he continued, "seeing some time ago an anecdote about a French wine seller, who said to his son: "Always remember, my son, that wine may be made out of anything, even grape juice." I have thought the same thing often when I have drunk the sweet cider of commerce. Of course there is a sweet cider that is made from apple juice and it may be kept from getting hard by the addition of bisulphite of lime. But there are immense quantities of sweet cider sold that are perfectly innocent of apple juice, and there are plenty of receipts for making it. People that know what good apple cider is are not likely to drink much of the manufactured cider, and if they did it would not hurt them, although I would not like to drink | cider made from this receipt."

The chemist showed the reporter a trade receipt for eider, which called for honey, catechu (an astringent resin), alum, yeast, bitter almonds, cloves, burnt sugar and alcohol. The receipt adds: "If too sweet, add sulphuric acid to suit

"Sulphuric acid," he said, "is not a healthful article of diet; but, as I said before, a thing may be perfectly innocent in a diluted shape and in a very small quantity, that would be hurtful in a concentrated form. Odd, isn't it, that delicate flowers and perfumes should come from the refuse of the abbatoir and the coal oil distillery? But a great many pleasant thing have humble origins.

Flashes of Good Sense.

Fall not out with a friend for a trifle. Seeds are fruit, words are but leaves. Go not into the society of the vicious. What is bought is cheaper than a gift. Crosses are ladders that lead to

Do what you ought let come what Extent to every one a kindly saluta-

A man is not good or bad for one Keep yourself innocent if you would

If you wish good advice consult an old He that will not be counseled cannot Be slow of giving advice, ready to do a

Save when you are young to spend vhen you are old. A bridle for the tongue is a necessary piece of furniture.

To persevere in one's duty and silent, is the best answer to calumny, There is one peculiar feature about s scandal. Every statement but the true one is readily accepted.

One of life's hardest lessons from th cradle to the grave is waiting. We send our ships out, but cannot patiently await If one only wished to be happy, this could be readily accomplished; but we wish to be happier than other people and this is almost always difficult for we believe others to be happier than they Mark Twain's Nervousness.

[Philadelphia News.] Mr. Clemens has some peculiarities. They tell me he is one of the most nervous men in the world. He has constant difficulty in keeping still, and somebody is obliged to go with him to keep him busy playing billiards or doing some thing else so that he will not have to be faced with the horrible alternative of sitting still.

Two seats are reserved for Mr. Clemens in the drawing-room car on the train by which he may travel. One of these seats in the smoke-room and the other is in the body of the car.

As soon as Mr. Clemens finishes smoking his cigar he has to get up and fly from the apartment, because he cannot bear the smell of tobacco smoke when he is not producing it himself. So he sits a smoke room again. That is the way he goes on all day long.

Flashes of Humor.

[Kansas City Times.] "Although Bacchus is said to have invented the drum," says the Philadelphia Call, "a drum is always empty, while Bacchus was always full." This joke was clipped by the exchange editor and carried into Mr. Hyde's room, and laid be fore the St. Louis Republican's advisory committee on humor for additional sparkle.

'snares' and 'bacchus,'" said Colonel Cundiff tentatively. "Or something about a drum with a

"You might put in something about faint gleam of satisfaction. "Or something about the long rol it takes," chimed in Colonal Grif Prather. "Can't you ring in a good word for Jacoby's in some way?" asked Colonel John Knapp anxiously "I have it." said Mr. Hyde decisively: "this shall be our reply: "But a drum is a very poor affair if it is not tight."

Prospectus. [Luling Wasp.]

C. B. Collins is editor-in-chief of this paper, and we have quite a corps of assistants. The local editor is an observant young man of varied attainments, and the agricultural editor doesn't know appears that at present there are six shapes. Formic acid, another ingredient, bishops who are widowers, five who have was originally obtained from ants, and will learn during next crop season.

Our musical critic runs a genuine Cremona in the orchestra at Bowers half, San Marcos River. Our distinguished

Established in 1847 by JOHANN HOFF, Royal Prussian Counsellor, Knight of the Order to the Crown, owner of the Imperial Austrian Gold Cross of Merit with the Crown, and owner of the Hohenzolleru Medal of Merit, Purveyor of almost all Sovereigns of Europe, Inventor and first manufacturer of the Malt Extract and possessor of 58 PRIZE MEDALS from Exhibitions and Scientific Societies. The denuine Imported Hoff's Malt bears on the FACE OF EVERY BOTTLE the SIGNATURE of

FECTIESMALL

SOIEN

PHILADELPHIA, August 9, 1883.

DEAR SIR: Having had occasion to give the preonged trial, I have at last definitely settled on Johann Hoff's Genuine Imported, M. Eisner, sole agent, as being the best and most reliable and meeting the indications in the largest majority of cases. It has always given me entire satisfaction. Respectfully yours, ALBERT L. A. TOBOLDT, M. D.

FOR

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 27, 1884.

EISNER & MENDELSON : DEAR SIRS: I am using your "Hoff's Malt Extract" in my practice and am pleased with results. Thanks for circulars, etc,

Very respectfully,

J. A. LARBABEE, M. D.

DYSPERSIA

To MORITZ EISNER, Esq., Sole Agent of Johann Hoff's Malt Extract for the U.S. of A., 320 Race Street, Philadelphia.

DEAR SIR: Please send one dozen of Johann Hoff's Malt Extract to the above hospital. I am very much pleased with it and my patients could not do with-

Resident Physician of the German Hospital, Philadelphia,

THE To M. Eisner, Esq., Agent for Johann Hoff's Genuine
Malt Extract, 320 Race Street, Philadelphia.
DEAR SIR: Dr. E. Wilson recommended Johann Hoff's Malt Extract as the best and only kind for our purpose. With kind regards, I am yours truly,
CHARLES S. TURNBULL, M. D.,
Assistant Professor Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Mr. M. EISNER: I have used the Johann Hoff's Malt Extract sent me with very good effect. WILLIAM PEPPER, M. D., Dean of the University of Pennsylvania, GARRISON HOSPITAL, Vienna, Austria.

Johann Hoff's Malt Extract has been largely used in the above hospital, and we cheerfully induse its use to the medical profession for general debility and convalescence, for which it has proved to be a most estimable remedy. (Signed) DR. LOEFF, Chief Physician of H. M. the Emperor's Garr. Hosp. Dr. PORIAS, House Physician.

Johann Hoff's Genuine Malt Extract has been chemically investigated in the laboratory of Prof. von Kletzinsky, and has been found to contain only articles which are of great benefit in cases of imperfect diges-tions and bad nutrition, also affections of the chest, for convalescence and general debility.

PROF. DR. GRANICHSTETTER.

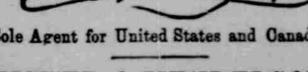

University of Vienna, Austria.

I have brought suit against Messrs, TARRANT & CO., for bottling and selling another preparation upon the reputation of my Genuine Malt Extract for which I have received 58 stick to it," observed Mr. Blubb with a Medals from Exhibitions, Medical Societies, etc., etc.

BEWARE of IMITATIONS! None genuine without signature o "JOHANN HOFF" and "MORITZ EISNER," on the neck of JOHANN HOFF, Berlin, Germany.

Beware of Imitations!

Sole Agents for United States, poses, and at one time he traveled over the matrimonial market, but a few plauthe country selling it to farmers and sible theories on the subject might be used. Most of these substances are used tor has gone to interview the president. PHILAS APPIA PA., U. S. A.